DLSU HAS BEEN CHOSEN as part of the 'Joint Development of Niche Programmes through Philippines-United Kingdom Linkages', a collaboration between the British Council and the Commission on Higher Education (CHED).

The program aims to upgrade the quality of Philippine higher education by introducing transnational education (TNE) programs—defined as educational courses provided by institutions in one country to students in another—on subject areas considered national priorities but remain unavailable locally such as food security and disaster risk reduction management.

Beginning 2018, DLSU students will have the opportunity to access UK degrees and gain global qualifications through postgraduate program.

Unlike studying abroad, taking TNE programs offers a cost effective way for Filipino students to access high-quality international programs in the Philippines.

Students may also have the chance to be mentored by foreign professors who are leaders in their fields. The learners' exposure to innovative teaching methods and environment will help them develop the skills they need for better career progression.

Once students finish the course, they will receive a diploma bearing names of both Philippine and UK universities—an international qualification that is recognized and respected by academics and employers worldwide.

Lasallian excels in Stanford University summer program

AN AB PSYCHOLOGY STUDENT OF DLSU, PATRICIA MARGARET VICTORIA GRADUATED WITH DISTINCTION from the inaugural Science, Technology, and Medicine Summer Program of the Stanford Anesthesia Summer Institute at Stanford University last June 30.

Through a rigorous screening process, Victoria was selected alongside 29 other students from a pool of approximately 1,000 applicants from across the globe. Chosen participants were from the United States, Turkey, Hong Kong, and China. Victoria is the sole Filipino to be accepted into the program.

The prestigious and intensive two-week program covered three major strains: Science, Technology, and Medicine. Participants worked directly with mentors from Stanford University, Harvard University, New York University, and the University of Colorado. All of these activities were conducted while the participants also worked on their research projects.

Her research work, "Effects of Music Pain Perception and Tolerance," tackled music in relation to psychology. Salima Hirji, program manager, said of Victoria, "She received distinction on her project as she went above and beyond. She was wonderful and has a bright future ahead of her."

Disaster Risk Reduction and Management

Global project to empower coastal communities

DLSU SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT RESEARCH CENTER RESEARCHER AND BEHAVIORAL SCIENCES ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR DR. MARLON ERA WAS RECENTLY APPOINTED as the country coordinator of a new project funded by the European Union Erasmus+ program called CABARET (CApacity Building in Asia for Resilience EducaTion).

The project aims to foster regional cooperation for more effective multi-hazard early warning and increased disaster resilience among coastal communities.

It is a 36-month action project involving higher education institutions in Asia (Region 6) and Europe. The project focuses on a subject area and a world region not sufficiently addressed by projects already being funded under previous schemes.

The project seeks to empower individuals and organizations with the skills, competencies, and credentials needed to pursue research, and to lead research at institutions in partner countries.

UK professors from the University of Huddersfield's Global Disaster Resilience Centre, namely, Professors Richard Haigh and Dilanthi Amaratunga, serve as the project lead of CABARET. Over 20 experts from across Europe and Asia launched the project in Colombo, Sri Lanka in March 2017.

Visiting prof discusses framework for disaster preparedness and recovery

Dr. Joost Santos (6th from left) tackles the Inoperability Input-Output Modelling Framework in his visit to the Laguna campus.

A VISITING PROFESSOR FROM THE GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY (GW), DR. JOOST SANTOS, DELIVERED A LECTURE on “Inoperability Input-Output Modelling Framework for Disaster Preparedness and Recovery” at DLSU Laguna Campus last July 11.

Attended by Industrial Engineering students and faculty, the lecture presented a format on how to manage and recover from disasters.

He tackled software applications for risk assessment, risk management, and business interruption as well as an economic framework that can aid in the assessment of disaster preparedness and recovery.

Joost showed how to evaluate disaster impacts on the economy. He discussed forecasting, particularly in areas with a major population and an economic center. He likewise discussed how to determine financial risks as well as solutions to minimize, if not totally avoid, disaster impacts.

Santos, an associate professor at GW's Department of Engineering Management and Systems Engineering, is involved in critical infrastructure protection projects in the process control systems for transportation, electric power, and oil/gas.

He utilizes and develops extensions to the economic input-output model to predict the ripple effects of disasters across interdependent infrastructure and economic systems.

“Your goal for your pupils must be that your words become spirit and life for them.”
